REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

To the School Board and Citizens:

I herewith submit my thirteenth annual report of the schools of Bow, for the year ending June 30, 1932.

There were maintained during the year, seven schools, for a school-year of 37 weeks, with no change in the teaching force.

The total school enrollment was 142, with a daily average attendance of 94.42 per cent.

The schools were in session on an average of 358.86 half-days.

Of the teachers employed, four are graduates of normal schools, six have state certificates and one has a state license.

The increasing complexity of modern life has made it necessary for the school to expand its activities to meet effectively the needs of the present, and prepare adequately for a future, the needs of which will inevitably be different.

How the local schools can be economically carried on without crippling necessary service is being seriously considered by the school authorities.

The world-wide financial depression, causing unemployment and an excessive burden of taxation, has aroused the keenest interest in the study of governmental control in all its separate forms.

Several committees have been organized, composed of social experts chosen from the various organizations, to study the "Recent Social Trends" in industry, in family life, in education, and in the field of religion.

One eminent committee was appointed by the President of the United States to study these problems. The chairman was Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell, Director of the National Bureau of Economic Research. He was assisted by six noted experts. The Rockefeller Foundation furnished $500,000 to pay the expenses of this investigation, and other organizations and individuals contributed another $500,000. Assistance was given by many different persons and organizations.

After three years of study the conclusions of the committee are published in two volumes, and there are an additional thirteen volumes containing evidences upon which the conclusions are based.

"The committee does not believe in a moratorium upon education," says the report. "On the contrary, it holds that education has to be stimulated to keep pace with mechanical inventions." The report also declares "that the trend of things indicates the necessity of social control and national planning."

The crisis confronting education in America is so alarming that the President called a conference of representatives of diverse interests to assemble in Washington to consider it.

This conference was made up of representatives of the American Council on Education, the American Farm Bureau, the American Federation of Labor, the National Association of Manufacturers and the National Grange.

The conference was significant because of its membership, deliberations and conclusions. Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior, was chairman of the convention. President Hoover opened the conference and set the tone of discussion by the statement that "Our nation faces the acute responsibility of providing a right of way for the American child."

The recommendations, after days of deliberation and discussion, are worthy of our thoughtful study and full consideration.

The conference emphasized the fact that, in general, the schools have been undernourished, rather than too richly fed. Also, that waste, wherever it existed, should be eliminated.

The committee voted to recommend:

"That the major wastes in education should be eliminated through the elimination of control and interference by politicians, of political appointments and of political corruption.

"That local governments and local school districts should be organized and consolidated.

"That state educational administration be reorganized through the creation of a non-political and professional agency for the administration of the educational policies of the state.

"That the state must assume the responsibility of assuring adequate public education to all local communities irrespective of their financial condition.

"That when states are unable to do so, the federal government must assume the responsibility of assuring adequate public education to those states in whatever manner may be required.

"That all governments, local, state and national, must direct attention to the immediate reformation of the system of taxation, since that is basic to any consideration of the financing of education."

Criticism is often made against the large number of subjects taught in our schools. Some of these are called "fads and frills" by those who believe that the old and narrow curriculum was adequate for all pupils.

It is true that the number of school subjects has greatly increased and that the increase has added materially to the cost of education. Whether or not these larger opportunities are justifiable, the school authorities are not responsible for them. For the most part they have resulted from legislation inspired by people who have visioned the need of a broader education and a better preparation for a citizenship in this modern and complex civilization. Many of the so-called "fads" of yesterday are regarded as fundamentals of today.

The school authorities believe that it is the duty of the school to train the young to do their full duty in life, and are endeavoring to devise the needs of future society and to plan the school work to meet these needs, and are anxious to co-operate with parents and citizens for these ends.

Our teachers are paid a comparatively small salary, the repairs upon the school buildings are as few as is consistent for health and efficiency, and the cost of books and supplies is kept low. The consolidation of schools, wherever feasible, seems a means of lessening school costs.

The progress of the work done in our schools is commendable.

The regular teachers and the instructors of special activities are faithfully and industriously working under well-planned and accredited lines of procedure.

The conduct of the pupils upon the playgrounds is being well supervised for their safety, happiness and health.

The disciplinary troubles, caused almost entirely by the lack of home training and parental government, impede the work of the school and deprive the pupils of a happy school life.

Teachers are peculiarly exposed to criticism and annoyances. The legal right of the teacher, apparently, is so little understood by parents and the general public that a knowledge of this law may assist in the administration of the affairs of the schools.

We quote some of the legal rights of the teacher as given by eminent authorities.

"The law will sustain a teacher in inflicting corporal punishment provided it is reasonable and for sufficient cause.

"The reasonable assumption is, that in respect of restraint and correction, the teacher 'is in loco parentis' and may exercise that degree of force that would be justifiable in a parent."

This law has existed from the foundation of our public schools and has been sustained by the decisions of the courts.

We sincerely urge parents and citizens to visit the schools frequently.

Your interest, thus shown, will encourage and inspire the children and teachers, and by these visits you will get a better knowledge of the school work and its management.

We appreciate the large attendance of parents and friends at the public exercises given at Memorial and Christmas time, and at the graduation exercises of the eighth grade, but as above stated, visits made during the regular school days will reveal more fully the real work and worth of the schools.

In conclusion, I express my appreciation for the co-operation and assistance given to me by the teachers, the school board and the citizens.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY S. ROBERTS,
Superintendent.

In addition to the usual health examinations, follow-up work and clinics, a considerable amount of time has been given to social welfare work and many homes visited in an attempt to help those needing assistance.

The distribution of food, clothing, and medical supplies, which have been received through various agencies, has required much time and travel. In addition, garden seeds and fertilizer have also been received and gardens were planted, with the result that families were able to can vegetables for the winter. Through the Red Cross, the State Unemployment Relief Committee, different societies and individuals, it has been possible to aid needy families.

To all who have assisted me in both the school and the relief work I wish to express my thanks and appreciation.
